About Flick Packaging Company

In business since the 1930's, Flick Packaging has developed the art of making boxes for items of various sizes and shapes into something of a science. Using systems and jigs born of decades of experience, they fashion heavy-duty cargo containers or lightweight plywood dustcovers, and literally everything in between. Flick manufactures packaging systems cost-effectively, in whatever size and volume necessary to fulfill their customers' specific requirements. Their packaging containers and products can be found serving military and industrial needs on six of the seven continents on Earth. With the recent conflicts in the Middle East Flick is hard at work building boxes to supply the armed forces with everything from armor to retrofit the Humvee fleet, tents to keep the troops out of the desert sand and munitions to keep the tanks and planes lethal.
